Alhassan was the MVP of this project in my opinion. He had experience in typescript and javascript but besides that he was kind of our group leader. He had experience and shared this experience as much as he can. He helped in many places I struggled. He also reviewed many code, made bugfixes and regulated the branches of git project. It helped me a lot because, at first I struggled with git so he took care of merging my branches later in the project. He contributed the most time and effort on this project.

Bertan and I usually worked on separate parts of the project so we did not collaborate often. He delivered his work on time and did his responsibility. His overall knowledge of the project was good but not as good as the others. Like me, he was inexperienced in the languages and learned over the course of the semester. I believe he did a good job on the project.

He was sometimes hard to communicate because he did not check his messages often which made planning part hard sometimes. However he still managed to do his part of the work in time. I believe he did a good job on the project.
